We upgraded the FNC to ACMS to provide services that we thought would be helpful to faculty in their work.

B. Tech Minor projects:

Topic: FACULTY NOTIFICATION CENTER

Abstract: Faculty Notification Centre is a new and intriguing form of communication and personal expression. Faculty are only just beginning to realize the value that these media present as sources of data for research. This project begins to unveil the untapped potential that the blogosphere provides for research. The project begins by introducing blogs, explaining their evolution, and the important role they play in society. A major contribution to knowledge comes from the paper's analysis of the motivation behind blogging – providing a framework of seven different motivational schemes. Building on this, the paper explores why blogs are a valuable and reliable source of data for analysis.

The Faculty Notification Centre provides the security and the privacy to the faculty, As modern day's greatest threat is intruding someone's privacy. FNC is developed to overcome these problems
